Scientists Study Prospect Earth Is Getting Warmer

NEW YORK.—Plans are being laid for a 14-man, three-nation scientific expedition to the Antarctic to start late this year. It's mainly a Norwegian affair, but with Swedish and British scientists participating, and all three governments kicking in toward the expenses.

The 14 men are going to spend two years in Queen Maud Land, the sector due south of Cape Town. The Norse government has a shadowy claim on this sector on the basis of early explorations, but the interior has never been explored except by aerial photograph.

Is the world getting warmer? That's one thing the expedition hopes to cast light on. The scientists will bore holes in glaciers and study their history. Arctic ice has been shrinking notably in recent years; is Antarctic ice shrinking too?

Geologists in the expedition will look for exploitable mineral deposits under the ice. Weathermen will release balloons carrying instruments and follow them with the latest in radar.

The dog sled is still an essential part of Antarctic exploration, but there will be plastic runners this time.

Whale Flesh Ruled Not Meat When Made into Sausages

BRIGHTON, ENGLAND.—A British court ruled that whale meat isn't—at least not for sausage-making purposes.

The judge fined Osborne Stores company 5 pounds ($20) because its meat sausage had only 25 per cent meat instead of the 30 per cent required by the ministry of food. Whale meat used to make up the rest of the required percentage is not mentioned in the food ministry's definition of meat, the court noted.

Osborne Stores said the sausages had been very popular.

The British, harassed by a meat shortage, had been eating whale meat for some time. Many seemed to like it.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Don't Fence Yourself In

Every spring, Handy Peterson and Easy Roberts patch up the stone wall that separates their farms. They walk along talking—Easy on one side, Handy on the other—picking up the fallen stones and putting them back.

Afterwards, over a friendly glass of beer, Easy says, "You know, wall-mending is a nice neighborly custom, but we really don't need that wall. We keep it up just because it happens to be there."

"Yes," says Handy, "a lot of walls and fences and boundaries keep on separating people for no good reason. Maybe we'd all be better off if some of them were torn down, instead of kept standing."

From where I sit, Handy said a mouthful. Take the "walls of intolerance" that people build up against each other. I like a temperate glass of beer now and then, you may prefer buttermilk—but that's no reason for me to criticize you, or you, me. Let's live and let live together—making more friends and fewer "walls."

GROWERS REQUEST SEED CERTIFICATION

Vahart—the winter-hardy, smut resistant wheat—was far in the lead as requests for certification from independent growers were counted at the Crop Improvement Association offices at V. P. I., says Secretary S. F. Grubbs.

The Association at last count had received requests from 161 growers for certification of 2,434 acres of Vahart. Closest runner-up was Thorne, with 27 requests for certification of 565 acres.

KENLAND CLOVER SHOWS PROMISE

Kenland, a new red clover developed in Kentucky, is showing promise of becoming a leader among Virginia's forage crops.

Dr. T. J. Smith, forage crops scientist for the Virginia Experiment Station at V. P. I., says experimental plantings of the newcomer put it on a par, or above older varieties being grown.

A recent trip to substations in the state led Smith to believe that Kenland is the outstanding variety at the Shenandoah Valley Field Station at Staunton this year; and that it, along with Northern Neck variety, is leading at the Piedmont Field Station at Orange.

At the Eastern Virginia Field Station, Williamsburg, Kenland, Northern Neck, and adapted varieties from Tennessee and Kentucky, are about even.

Last year, Kenland was equal to or better than Northern Neck, and definitely outyielded unadapted strains from western states.

Seed for Kenland should be available soon, Dr. Smith said.

TOPPING, SUCKERING TOBACCO DESIRABLE

Tobaccomen who do not top and sucker their crop can lose as much as $141 per acre, says E. M. Mathews, agronomist at the Bright Tobacco Research Station at Chatham.

Three-year averages at the Station show that topped and suckered tobacco produced 1,589 pounds per acre, valued at $803. Tobacco that was neither topper nor suckered produced only 1,287 pounds valued at $662 per acre.

Failing to top alone resulted in a loss of $133 per acre. Failing to sucker alone resulted in a loss of $61 per acre.

However, in spite of the $61 per acre loss, the unsuckered tobacco actually sold on the market for about 1.4 cents per pound more than the leaves from topped and suckered tobacco.

In his tests Mathews also found that yield and price per acre on plots of tobacco not included in a legume-corn rotation were not as high as the yield and value per acre of plots where the tobacco was included in a rotation.

SILLY BIRD

(Raleigh News and Observer)

(The news comes that near Goldsboro a wren "with more faith than common sense" has built her nest in a dynamite box, atop two sticks of dynamite. And already the nest has five eggs in it.

Perhaps this should be classified under the heading of "nature news." It is possible, however, that in it nature provides a parable which should be listed under "international affairs." About the only difference between this wren and some men and nations is that so far as the wren knows the sticks of dynamite are just sticks. Man, on the other hand, knows that he lives in a world which now possesses the power to 'blow' itself or great parts of it to pieces at any given or insane moment. And among men there are those who talk about the possibility that a "preventive war" might not be a bad thing.

Oh, yes, that's a crazy little wren down there near Goldsboro, but it hardly behooves any two - legged creature called man to call her crazy.

The Idler, published in 1758, stated that "the trade of advertising is now so near to perfection that it is not easy to propose any improvement," according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.
